Molecular tests: FDA-approved PCR assays, which test for the genes encoding toxin, are same-day tests that are highly sensitive and specific for the presence of a toxin-producing C. diff organism. Molecular assays can be positive for C. diff in individuals who are asymptomatic and do not have infection. Patients with other causes of diarrhea might be positive, which could lead to over-diagnosis and treatment. When using multi-pathogen (multiplex) molecular methods, the results should be read with caution as the pre-test probability of C. diff infection might be less. Antigen detection for C. diff: These are rapid tests (
